After the Armenian Genocide, hundreds of thousands of Armenians — including my grandparents and great-grandparents — migrated to Beirut and preserved an ancient way of life while helping weave Lebanon's rich, diverse social tapestry. That tapestry is being torn apart by the port explosion of 4 August, and the years of governmental incompetence that led up to it. In the absence of a legitimate government, it will be up to local and international organizations active on the ground to help Beirut recover. If you're outside Lebanon, want to help Beirut, and are able, please consider supporting these organizations by contributing and/or sharing this resource with others.
